Why We're Here

Introduction and History

Far From the Heart was developed in 2006 through workshops with teens in Grey and Bruce counties. The goal was to create a forum theatre presentation that would address the issues of relationship abuse, sexual assault, and healthy relationships while reflecting the realities of rural youth. The play has since been translated to French as Loïn du Coeur and toured 9 times.

Far From the Heart is a forum theatre production. As a medium, forum theatre addresses social issues by dramatizing problematic scenarios and then allowing the audience to take the place of different characters, intervene at key points in the plot, and try different solutions that will ideally create more positive outcomes. As members of the audience take the places of characters, they rehearse for real life situations, begin a community conversation about the issues, and demonstrate strategies to address them. After each audience intervention, the show's host (we call them a Joker) guides a conversation about the ideas presented, what worked, what didn't, and what the community thinks about it all.

Far From the Heart specifically addresses relationship abuse, sexual assault, party safety, gender expectations, consent, and healthy relationships through the lives of four characters. Those four characters (two guys and two girls) are teens navigating social pressures, relationship expectations, and self-confidence issues on the night of a big party. Those pressures culminate in a sexual assault. The assault is not portrayed graphically.

A 2012 study by the University of Regina found that Far From the Heart successfully shifts student perspectives about dating violence and sexual assault. Teachers and community facilitators are key parts of this process and – as someone working with youth – your involvement is crucial to the success of this work. We're here to help prevent violence by supporting teen learning.

Because Far From the Heart addresses sensitive issues, the presentation process is more involved than most visiting performances. The process includes pre-show activities to prepare students to discuss these sensitive issues – the activities serve as an extended trigger warning, the performance and debriefing conversations with facilitators from local resources on the day of the play, and suggested follow-up activities with curriculum links to support ongoing learning and dialogue about these issues.

This guide will give you the tools you need to prime yourself and your students for the presentation. You can read more about Far From the Heart on our website, but for now it's enough to say that it is a youth driven and youth centred project, that it supports various areas of the Ontario curriculum, and that it takes a light and playful approach to heavy issues. The following pages provide more information about those issues and outline the pre and post show activities that amplify the impact of the presentation. You can adapt the follow-up activities to suit your students' ability and we hope that you'll use this as a springboard for further conversations and positive change. Here's a break-down of the process.

The Big Picture

The Steps in the Project

This is the structure of Far From the Heart including where the activities in the guidebook fit in. These are the steps:

Step One - Preparation:

Teacher & Facilitator Orientation and Training

Sheatre will provide an orientation session, an orientation video for staff who can't attend in person, a Teacher Orientation Booklet, and this Educational Toolkit to help you prepare for the show.

Pre-Show Student Activities in Days Before the Play

- Teachers will distribute and complete the relationship reflection or questionnaire activities for students.
- Teachers will lead the On the Street Interview activity for group reflection.
- Teachers will clearly explain that the presentation is about sexual assault, relationship abuse, and healthy relationships and reiterate audience expectations.
- If you cannot dedicate class time to the preparation activities, show your class the short pre-show video at www.farfromtheheart.com

Step Two - Presentation:

Day of the Play

The presentation is scheduled to last roughly 2 hours but it is sometimes possible for the debriefing conversation to continue as time and your schedules allow.

- 30 minute problem play
 - 60 minutes for audience intervention
 - 5 minute transition to classrooms and debriefing locations
 - 30 minutes for small group debriefing
- The first 90 minutes take place in the theatre

Step Three - Integration and Reflection:

Days and Weeks After the Play

As you can, use activities suggested in the Educational Toolkit to continue the conversation and encourage your students to actively promote healthy relationships and undermine violence in their communities. We'll help to start the conversation; it's up to your community to keep it going.

Teacher Feedback Questionnaire

Your feedback is important to us. Please let us know which activities your class completed and what you thought of their engagement.

Curriculum Links

Far From The Heart

Far From the Heart supports aspects and can help to fulfill requirements of the Ontario curriculum in multiple subject areas. The following curriculum references are examples from various strands and course levels (Open, Academic, Workplace Preparation etc.). We include these references to suggest ways in which your existing programming can be enhanced by participating in Far From the Heart and directly fulfill expectations of the Ontario Curriculum. They are arranged by course and grade. A more comprehensive list of curriculum connections can be found at www.farfromtheheart.com under the 'education' tab.

Preparation: Pre-show In-class Activities

Talking about these issues can open up a can of worms, but worms aren't bad. If you prepare your students properly, then they won't be grossed out or act out when they're introduced to the issues.

On past tours, we've seen a remarkable difference between the classes that have and have not been properly prepared. Preparation is essential. If the can of worms spills over we all need to help clean it up but preparation doesn't just help us adults do our jobs; it helps students maximize their learning and keeps them safer. Preparatory activities serve as an extended trigger warning to help students ready themselves for – or arrange to avoid – the discussion.

The preparatory activities include:

1. Personal Survey AND/OR Relationship Reflection – Private activity – 10 minutes: Please choose at least one of the activities and provide each student with a copy to have them complete individually. The personal reflection gives them a private entrance to the subject matter and primes them for the public reflection that follows. You may choose to take up the activities as a class.
2. On-the-Street Interview – Group reflection – 30 minutes: This game-based activity will get students talking about and assessing their opinions in a social and informal way.
3. Statistical Review – You can use the statistics provided to introduce the issues (this is why we're doing this) and add context. You could also ask students to research applicable statistics or related current events from the news. Mention them when it will strengthen a point.
4. How to Be a Good Audience – 5 minutes: This basic reminder about etiquette will only take a moment but it keeps the students from acting out when we open the can of worms and it makes it easier for the community facilitators to identify who needs support during the show.
5. If you cannot dedicate class time to the preparation activities, show your class the 5 minute Student Orientation video at www.farfromtheheart.com on the education page.

Relationship Reflection

The heart on the back of this page represents a relationship. Fill the centre of the heart with feelings, behaviours, and actions that you would want in a relationship. Use the space outside of the heart to list feelings, behaviours, and actions that you would not want in a relationship.

You can copy words and sentences from the list below or come up with your own. This activity is only for you; please don't compare answers while you're working.

- ☐ Check the way we talk to our friends about dating or hooking up
- ☐ Avoid pornography (internet, magazine, movies, etc.)
- ☐ Treat others how I want to be treated ☐ Understand that girls and women have the same rights over their body as boys and men

To what extent do you agree with the following statements?

27. My teacher has provided me with support regarding healthy sexual relationships.

- ☐ Strongly Disagree ☐ Disagree ☐ Neutral ☐ Agree ☐ Strongly Agree

28. If I wanted to report a sexual assault or occurrence of sexual violence, I would know what to do.

- ☐ Strongly disagree ☐ Disagree ☐ Neutral ☐ Agree ☐ Strongly Agree

On-the-Street Interview

Method: Participatory Education

You get to role-play as a “news reporter” gathering information. Why? This puts you in a slightly different role than ‘the teacher’, freeing up the students, especially at the beginning of the exercise. You help to keep things rolling. Yes, this works with high school students but if you want to approach the exercise in a non-game-playing way, that’s fine as well. It works both ways.

Purpose:

- To enable free discussion and gather students’ opinions on controversial topics in a safe environment.
- To get the students thinking about the issue and their responses to it before going to the presentation.
- To prepare them for the forum.

Resources to Prepare: Three (3) signs: Agree, Disagree, Neutral

Agree and Disagree are posted on opposing walls of the classroom. Neutral is placed in the centre.

Provided Resources:

A list of strong statements that will elicit differing responses is provided.

Time:

Up to 30 minutes

Instructions:

One person plays the role of the “on the street news reporter” (this is probably the teacher) equipped with pretend microphone and pretend camera person. That person sets up the concept and rules of play.

Script for set-up goes something like this:

“So-and-so here from Local News on a very important assignment. I’m here on the street today to collect opinions from students at (name of your school)....

You will notice that this room is designated into Three Areas: Agree, Disagree, and Neutral/Unsure. Signs on the walls mark the first two. (Point them out). Neutral is in the middle of the room.

I’m going to read a statement. Based on your personal opinion, after I’ve read the statement, go to the area of the room that best represents your opinion. If you have no opinion, come to the middle of the classroom, which is the Neutral area. Once you’re all assembled, discuss your opinion with the others there. You’ll have about <however many ~ 5 - 8> minutes to talk this over. Make sure everyone’s opinion is heard. Then I’ll be coming around to capture your group statement for Local News. Each group will assign one spokesperson to speak to Local News on their behalf.”

Read the first statement. Pause. Read it again.

Remind them to go to the area that matches their opinion.

Visit the groups to make sure that discussion is going well. Stay in character (as much as is humanly possible).

Keep time. Make sure that this is a collection of opinions more than a discussion or debate of right and wrong ideas.

Go around to the groups near the end of the time period and ask if each has designated a spokesperson who will speak for them. Ask the spokesperson to come up with a consolidated statement on behalf of the whole group.

Far From The Heart

(Usually this will lead to the spokesperson checking with the group to make sure they've got something appropriate to say. At the end of the time limit, call their attention back.)

Go to each group as the reporter.

Ask for the spokesperson (even if you know already).

With the first group, repeat the statement. Ask for their consolidated opinion.

Once you've gone to each group, read the next statement and repeat the process.

Statements:

Several statements are provided. Most of these statements also appear in the quiz: "This is What I Think." You may choose to ask fewer as time and group energy dictates.

- There is no excuse for abusing another person.
- Being an abuser is a choice; being a victim is also a choice.
- Forced intercourse is alright if they have been dating a long time.
- It is a crime to have sex with someone if they are passed out.
- All unwanted acts of a sexual nature are sexual assault.
- Having sex with someone proves you love them.
- It's okay to look at a sext if the person who received it is sharing it.
- The way a woman is dressed is related to the chances of her being sexually assaulted.
- Forced intercourse is alright if he spends money on her.
- In 51% of all incidents of dating violence reported by Canadian women, the perpetrator was under the influence of alcohol.
- A healthy relationship is an equal relationship.

Notes:

If someone is undecided, get them to go to the area that they feel best represents their response as quickly as possible. Make a choice. Go, go, go. The TV station has a limited budget and a limited amount of time. If they really can't decide, direct them to the neutral area.

Some groups may be large. This may require giving more time for everyone to be able to give his or her idea. Play that by ear. It is also possible that one area may have only one person in it. That person will simply get to think about and formulate their own individual statement.

Side-coaching: "We're here today to simply gather opinions. This is not a debating exercise."

The game will likely generate some discussion and response between the groups. A bit of that is fine, of course, however it is preferable to keep them going and on task. General discussion and processing can follow after the exercise.

Statistical Overview: Sexual Assault

Definition: Sexual assault is any unwanted sexual act done by one person to another person. This can mean anything from unwanted touching of a sexual nature to rape.

Far From The Heart

There are many types of sexual assault that appear in the Criminal Code. They include descriptions of a variety of acts (for example, the use of a weapon, causing bodily harm and making threats) as well as the types of relationships within which sexual contact is or may be a criminal offence (for example, when one person is in a position of authority over the other or where there is a relationship of dependency by one person towards the other). The penalties for committing these different types of sexual offences vary depending upon the severity of the offence.

For the most recent Canadian Statistics regarding sexual assault and spousal violence please visit:

<https://www.ontario.ca/page/dispelling-myths-about-sexual-assault>

<http://www.statcan.gc.ca/pub/85-002-x/2013001/article/11766-eng.pdf>

General Information:

- Fifty-one percent of all Canadian women have experienced at least one incident of sexual or physical violence. Close to 60% of these women have survived more than one incident of violence. (Statistics Canada 1993)
- 1 in 3 women will experience sexual assault in their lifetimes
- 1 in 6 men will experience sexual assault in their lifetimes.
- 86% percent of all sexual offences reported to the police in 2004 involved girls under the age of 18 (OWD 2009; up from 63% in 1996)
- The results of a 2011 study showed that 61% of male participants did not consider forcing sex on an acquaintance as rape (Weiler-Polak, 2011)
- In 2008, dating relationships accounted for one-quarter of all violent incidents and one-third of homicides committed by intimate partners. (Statistics Canada, Police-reported dating violence in Canada, 2008 <http://www.statcan.gc.ca/pub/85-002-x/2010002/article/11242-eng.htm>)
- In 51% of all incidents of dating violence reported by Canadian women, the perpetrator was under the influence of alcohol.
- In 86% of sexual assaults reported to the police the victim knew the accused – they were peers, acquaintances, co-workers or family members. (OWD 2009)
- 80% of the pregnant and parenting teens that seek assistance from Family Services Regina are victims of dating abuse. In most cases this abuse begins prior to or during the pregnancy.
- Four out of five female undergraduates reported that they had been victims of violence in a dating relationship. Twenty-nine percent of that number reported incidents of sexual assault. (OWD 1995, I)
- In cases of sexual assault reported to the police in 2003, the vast majority were female victims (80%). Over half of these victims were girls between 11 and 17 years old. (OWD 2009)
- 60% of Canadian college-aged males report that they would commit sexual assault if they were certain that they would not be caught. (OWD 1995, 2)
- Every minute of every day, a Canadian woman or child is being sexually assaulted. (OWD 1998)

Far From The Heart

- 1 in 5 male students surveyed said that forced intercourse was alright “if he spends money on her”, “if he is stoned or drunk”, or “if they had been dating for a long time.” (Johnson 1996, 120)
- Of all incidents of sexual assault, 24% took place in the victim’s home, 20% in the perpetrator’s home, 10% in someone else’s home, 25% in a car, and 21% in a public place. (OWD 1995, 3)
- 54% of girls under the age of 16 have experienced some form of unwanted sexual attention. Twenty-four percent have experienced rape or coercive sex, and 17% have experienced incest. (Holmes and Silverman 1992; Russell 1996)
- In cases of sexual assault reported to the police in 2003, the vast majority were female victims (80%). Over half of these victims were girls between 11 and 17 years old. (OWD 2009)
- In 2010, North Bay Police Department investigated 1,059 domestic violence calls, that’s one call every eight hours. (<http://endthecycleofabuse.com/>)
- In Nipissing, shelters are at or over capacity. (<http://endthecycleofabuse.com/>)

Reporting on Sexual Assault:

- According to Statistics Canada, less than 10% of sexual assaults are reported to the police (OWD 2009)
- Statistically, out of every 1,000 sexual assaults in Canada only 33 are reported to the police. Of those 29 are recorded as a crime, 12 have charges laid, 6 are prosecuted, and only 3 lead to conviction. (<http://sacha.ca/resources/statistics>)

Aboriginal Women

- Eight in 10 Aboriginal women in Ontario reported having experienced violence. (Ontario Native Women’s Association 1989, 17)
- Up to 75% of victims of sex crimes in Aboriginal communities are females under the age of 18; 50% of those are under age 14, and almost 25% are younger than 7 years of age. (McIvor and Nahanee 1998, 65)
- In 2004, Aboriginal women were three times more likely to experience spousal violence and the rate of spousal homicide for Aboriginal women was eight times the rate for non-Aboriginal women.
- The shelters in Nipissing help more than 350 women and children a year, and are currently at capacity. Statistics also say that one in five aboriginal women report being a victim of domestic abuse, three times higher than statistics for non-aboriginal women. (<http://endthecycleofabuse.com/>)

How to Be A Good Audience

“Students need teachers like singers need pitch pipes; they set the tone”

Far From The Heart

Time: 5 minutes

Remember that Far From the Heart is an interactive performance. It is different from most assemblies and it's vastly different from watching television, a movie or a concert, where leaving your seat, eating snacks, and talking or whispering to friends won't disrupt the performance. In live theatre all of these actions are rude and disruptive. The actors in front of you could be interrupted and disturbed by inappropriate behaviour.

Some students aren't used to seeing a live theatre presentation, so please talk about the difference and why this kind of action is not appropriate during scenes. There will be opportunities to speak and interact. We expect – and encourage – high energy and chatting about the show to occur, but timing is everything. Please review your school's assembly rules before the show and add these guidelines for good measure.

A Good Audience...

1. Listens. Please don't chat during the show. Unless – this is an interactive performance, remember – the actors ask you what you think. Then you are welcome to talk to your neighbours and the actors about your ideas and about a possible solution to the action on stage.
1. Focuses. We hope that all audience members will be focused on the performance and the surrounding conversation. This requires putting your phone away.
2. Remains seated unless asked by the artists for participation. In general, we discourage coming in and out of the auditorium during the show. Theatre is like a family road trip, head to the washroom before you settle in to your seat because we're not pulling over. That said, we're going to be talking about relationship violence, abuse, and assault so if a student is distressed during the show they are welcome to leave; a counselor will follow to offer support.
3. Participates when asked. There will be opportunities to intervene. Get out there, get on stage, and get involved!
4. Respects and encourages each other. Support your fellow students who offer ideas and thoughts. It takes courage to get up on stage. Don't try to hurt people's feelings, cheer them on instead and be sensitive and kind.
5. Includes teachers. Teachers must remain with their students in the performance area to supervise and discipline if necessary.

Enjoy the Presentation!

If a Child Discloses Sexual Assault or Abuse

Far From The Heart

Far From the Heart depicts relationship violence and sexual assault. It might be the first time your students have had a chance to safely speak about the issues or their personal experiences. It is possible – and likely – that a student may be triggered by the presentation or disclose information about past sexual assault or abuse. As adults and educators we are obligated to support those students. This can seem like a daunting task but we've got resources to help. Your school and board will also have policies for how to respond. These resources are not meant to supersede those policies. They are a general outline of duty and helpful responses.

The following is an excerpt of information from:

Understanding Family, Immigration & Refugee Law: E-Learning for VAW Front-Line Workers
<http://www.springtideresources.org/resource/fact-sheet-duty-report>

Although this document was written in response to domestic violence issues, educators do have a duty to report if a child is in danger.

Duty To Report

By Pamela Cross, LLB

All professionals working with children have a duty to report suspicions of child abuse. The Child and Family Services Act sets out the legal duty to report obligation:

- it applies to everyone, including those who perform professional or official duties related to children
- there is a duty to report if the person has “reasonable grounds to suspect” that a child may be in need of protection
- this includes harm or risk of harm from physical, sexual or emotional abuse or neglect.

“Reasonable grounds to suspect” means there is enough information for an average person, exercising normal and honest judgment, to make a decision to report. It is less information than would be required to make the person certain.

Professionals have a higher duty to report than other members of the public and can be fined up to $1,000 if they fail to report their suspicions that a child may be in need of protection.

What do I have to do?

It can be confusing to know when to report and to whom. Laws are different for children under 16 than they are for people over the age of 16. It is also different depending on the parties involved in the situation.

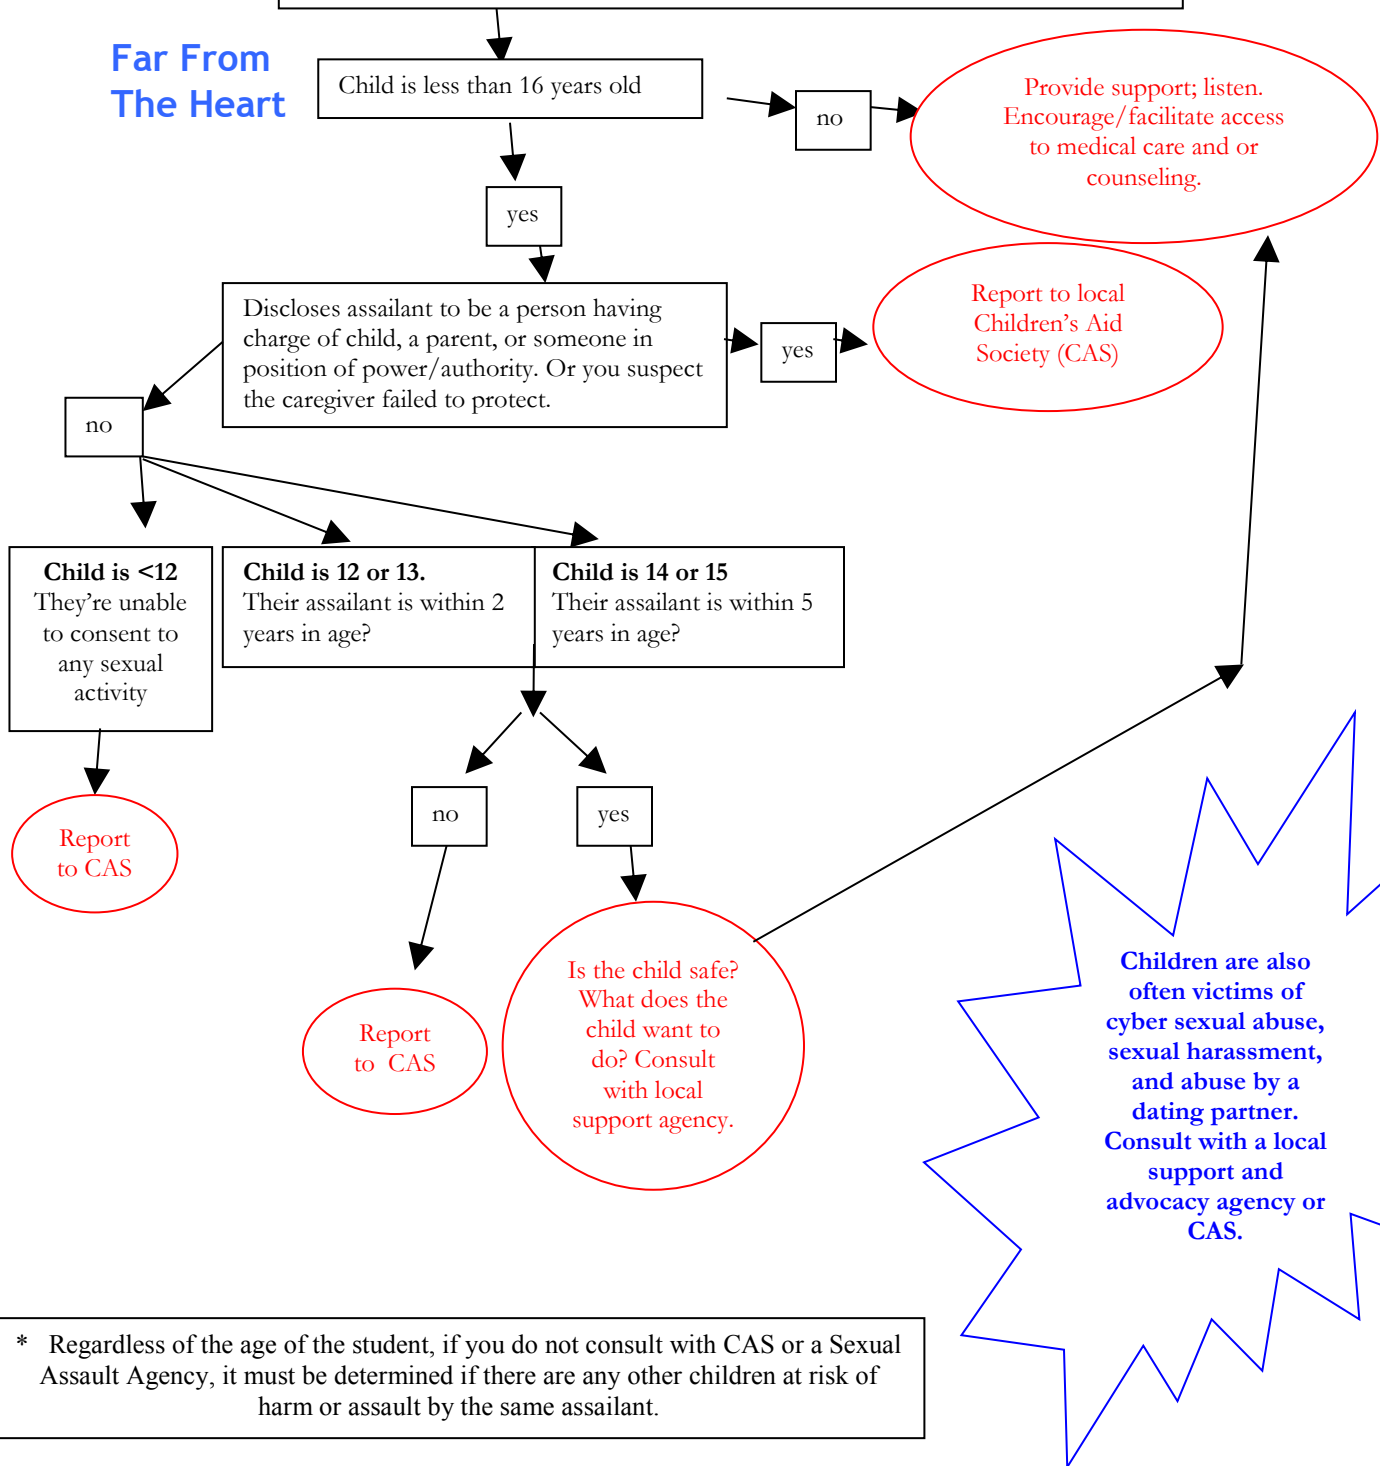

The following flow chart and narratives demonstrate a recommended path of action in the event that a child discloses sexual assault or abuse. It was prepared by the Sexual Assault and Partner Abuse Care Centre (SA&PACC), Grey Bruce Health Centre, Owen Sound, Ontario

When the chart references contacting the VAW agency, please contact the appropriate Violence Against Women / Sexual Assault Agency in your community. For students over the age of 16 years, CAS may be able to assist with linking to resources.

In the following flow chart, if the answer to the fact in the box is “no” you follow one course of action; if the answer is “yes”, you follow another course of action.

A Child Discloses Sexual Assault / Abuse

What to Look For / How to Respond

Sexual assault and relationship abuse are traumatic and survivors cope in different ways. Watch for symptoms and reference the following list for helpful responses if you're not sure what to say. Again, these suggestions are not meant to supersede the protocols of your organization.

What you may see/hear:

- Almost all sexual assault/partner abuse victims blame themselves in some way for what has happened.
- They will often have trouble trusting other people.
- They may be experiencing a wide variety of symptoms including: physical symptoms, panic attacks, flashbacks, nightmares, disassociation, intrusive thoughts, self-harming behavior, suicidal thoughts, anxiety, hyper-vigilance, etc.

What to say/do:

- Listen to them.
- Thank them for trusting you and sharing with you.
- Let her/him know that you believe them, be a good listener, do not pry, do not make assumptions.
- "It is not your fault," "Sexual assault/abuse is against the law".
- Whatever their response is, it is "normal".
- If the student was drunk and/or under the influence, they were unable to consent, therefore "it was sexual assault".
- Allow her/him as much control as possible within your mandate to report. Together make an anonymous call to CAS/police/VAW agency.
- Accessing help sooner rather than later will allow a greater choice of options for care and will improve recovery.
- Encourage access to medical care (VAW agency, Public Health Unit, family doctor).
- If not accessing further care, determine if other children are at risk.
- It is a student's right to decline to access medical care. If this happens, continue support and encouragement about medical care/counseling if appropriate. Help to make sure they have access to the supports they need and want.
- Take care of yourself. Access support as needed from friends and family, professional resources, and the resources within your community.

Western University offers a free online training to help service providers in the law enforcement, social work, and education sectors best respond to disclosures of sexual violence. If you want to learn more you can find the training at:

<http://learningtoendabuse.ca/responding-disclosures-sexual-violence>

There is a one hour training video here: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yLiA-ujvIkU>

Far From The Heart

Sample Scenarios

Questions to Consider:

- Is this person currently safe?
- What will be your first response?
- What does this person need from you?
- Will you report this?
- Does this person currently have the supports they want and need?
- What questions do you need to consider as you respond?

Scenario One:

During the debrief, a female student describes sexual harassment that she is experiencing at work. Her co-workers have been calling her clothing slutty (it's a restaurant and she wears the uniform) and continually telling her that she should give them blow jobs. She has reported this to her manager and nothing has been done. She is starting to dread going to work and feeling bad about both her body and being a woman.

Scenario Two:

You notice that a student is in tears in the audience during the show and interventions. They appear unable to move and the friend sitting beside them is looking around trying to get someone's attention.

Scenario Three:

During the presentation, a student stands up abruptly and walks quickly out of the room.

Scenario Four:

A male student tells you after the show that he was sexually assaulted a year ago, coped poorly using alcohol, and is now in counseling and doing much better.

Scenario Five:

During the debriefing conversation, a student tells the group that she was in an emotionally abusive relationship two years ago and talks about the ways she wishes her friends had supported her.

Scenario Five: Listen empathetically; thank her for sharing her story. Gauge the reaction of the group and direct the conversation in non-judgmental directions, possibly suggesting ways to be a good friend or what makes a healthy relationship.

Scenario Four: Listen empathetically; thank him for trusting you with his story, and tell him you're glad he's doing better.

Scenario Three: Follow the student to find out whether they're in distress. If they are, then offer to take the student to one of the established safe spaces. You may wish to let a counselor, guidance teacher or administrator take the lead. If the trigger is related to a known and addressed incident, support them as they calm down. If they have not previously disclosed, follow your organization's protocols, establish whether the student is safe, if you have a duty to report, and what supports are available to them. Above all, respond with empathy and do not blame them.

Scenario Two: The student is obviously in distress. Approach her as subtly as you can and offer to help her leave the room. Make sure another teacher or attending counselor leaves with you and offer to take the student to one of the established safe spaces. You may wish to let a counselor, guidance teacher or administrator take the lead. If the trigger is related to a known and addressed incident, support them as they calm down. If they have not previously disclosed, follow your organization's protocols, establish whether the student is safe, if you have a duty to report, and what supports are available to them. Above all, respond with empathy and do not blame them.

Suggested Responses Scenario One: Respond empathetically, listen to what she wants to share, let her know that she doesn't deserve to be treated like that, that it's illegal, and there are supports available. Ask if her guardians know and whether she has considered reporting to a higher level of management or the Ontario Human Rights Commission www.ontario.ca/humanrights. Consider calling a local shelter or support organization for advice.

The Presentation

Far From The Heart

The Interactive Play

Time: 90 minutes

Far From the Heart is not your run of the mill community play. It's an interactive theatre forum which means the performance happens in two parts. To start, the audience views the short (30 minute) play once to see the problems and the unhappy ending. Second, we go back to the start of the play and repeat some key scenes. During this second time through, any audience can stop the action and climb on stage to enter the world of the play to try to affect a positive change. The spectators become spect-actors offering alternative choices that will hopefully create a safer outcome.

A Joker emcees the performances and leads short lively discussions between audience interventions. They ask questions like: did the idea work or not and why? Will it solve anything? This process lets us explore relationships that lead to conflict, violence, and oppression. When the audience gets to see and talk about fictional violence they learn different ways of preventing or responding to situations in real life. It's a learn-by-doing approach and rehearsal for a reality we hope they never encounter.

The process is beautiful. When the audience gets the chance to critically observe and analyze behaviors, they learn problem solving skills. Theatre forum lets them test drive the knowledge they'll need to resolve conflicts, negotiate relationships, and reduce risk. Together the participants and spectators in each intervention gain a deeper understanding of the dynamics and relationships surrounding the issues.

We know, however, that these topics can open a can of worms so we ask that teachers sit in the audience with their students. This lets you tune in with their responses and supervise their conduct. If the can of worms turns into a Pandora's box for someone – if they are triggered or upset by the show – then please remember that there will be counselors present to support them. Remind students that they can leave if they need to and let a counselor know if someone needs their support. The well-being of students is Far From the Heart's primary concern.

The Play's Story Line

The girls and guys are concerned about image, popularity, and sexual conquest at The Big Party. Felicity finds herself tormented by her controlling boyfriend, abandoned by her best friend, and then raped by the guy who seemed to want to help her. Their judgment is clouded by alcohol and inexperience and you'll see examples of peer pressure, controlling relationships, objectification, unsafe partying, and sexual assault.

Post-show Interactive Debriefing Discussion

Time: 30 minutes

Immediately after the show, we talk about it. In most schools, students will break into groups of roughly 30 people – likely their classes – to debrief with facilitators from local and partner agencies. Teachers will also need to be present for this activity. The facilitators will generate discussions using a variety of approaches. They can answer questions, debunk myths, and inspire action. This makes sure that the first conversations students have after the show are productive, informed, and compassionate. When it isn't possible to break into smaller groups, we hold one or two larger debriefing discussions to introduce resources and talk about the issues. It's up to us as adults to model the communication skills we're encouraging.

Integration: Post-show In-class Activities

We know that it's not possible to solve these societal issues with a single two-hour production. People's beliefs and understandings shift slowly and that makes follow up important. Far From the Heart opens a new door to let students consider and speak about these issues. The post-show activities keep the door open and help students actively process and share what they are learning.

These follow-up activities will:

- 1. Deepen their knowledge

- Explore resources to expand on key concepts.

- 2. Encourage reflection

- This can take the form of group discussions, research, or writing inspired by one of the resources listed below and available online at www.farfromtheheart.com

- 3. Spread what they've learned

- Students will share what they've learned or develop a message of positive change through a creative project.

- 4. Gather your feedback

- Teacher feedback is essential to the success of Far From the Heart.

Deepen their knowledge

These issues that Far From the Heart presents are more complex than a two hour play can fully explore. The first step in the follow-up process is to help students further engage with some of the issues they have begun to explore through Far From the Heart.

We have collected a handful of resources to help you present the ideas of consent, healthy relationships, and sexual assault. Feel free to use your own materials or tailor the resources to the interests, ability, and schedule of your class. See www.youtube.com/farfromthehearttube for a greater selection of videos to get the conversation rolling.

Consent:

- Western University produced an animated video called 'Cycling Through Consent' that uses bike riding as a metaphor for sexual activity. It's similar to the famous 'Consent is Like Tea' video but we think this one is more thorough.
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-JwIKjRaUaw>
- Youtuber Laci Green produced this vlog called 'Wanna Have Sex? (Consent 101)' to explain consent. She gives examples of language and situations that communicate or preclude consent.
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TD2EooMhqRI>
- Sexologist Dr. Lindsey Doe explains consent in her vlog Sexplanations
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Q5H6QvNmfiY>

Healthy Relationships

- Please distribute the 'Are You Cool' resource listed on the next page. You could also brainstorm your own relationship thermometer as a class.

Sexual Assault:

- Myth Busters: Misconceptions enable and excuse sexual violence. There are a variety of reputable websites with resources dedicated to dispelling the myths that can surround sexual assault. Exploring these lists will expose students to more accurate information and allow opportunities to question popular beliefs and assumptions. You can find lists of sexual assault myths through:
 - the Government of Ontario
<https://www.ontario.ca/page/dispelling-myths-about-sexual-assault>
 - the Ontario Coalition of Rape Crisis Centres
<http://www.sexualassaultsupport.ca/page-535956>
 - the University of Minnesota
<http://www.d.umn.edu/cia/faculty/jhamlin/3925/myths.html>

Bystander Intervention

- Sexologist Dr. Lindsey Doe explains the Bystander Effect, why groups make it hard for people to speak up when something is wrong, and what you can do about it.
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ldi_cohMcI
- Domestic violence and sexual abuse are often called "women's issues." But in this talk, Jackson Katz points out that these are intrinsically men's issues -- and shows how these violent behaviors are tied to definitions of manhood. A call for us all -- women and men -- to call out unacceptable behavior and be leaders of change.

Far From The Heart

"Are You Cool?"

The Far From the Heart Youth Advisory Committee chose this brochure as the best resource handout for teens for its production quality, colour, and approach. They felt that it made teens and the whole issue seem important.

The Youth Committee recommended that teachers hand out and review this brochure in class following the presentation so that the brochures were not simply left on the auditorium floor.

Copies of the brochure may be obtained by contacting:

- METRAC: <http://www.metrac.org/resources/resources.htm>

Are You Cool? was produced through a partnership among the Kawartha Pine Ridge District School Board, the Peterborough Victoria Northumberland Clarington Catholic District School Board, the YWCA of Peterborough Victoria and Haliburton, and Peterborough Lakefield Community Police Services.

HEALTHY or UNHEALTHY?

Having a partner (boyfriend/girlfriend) can be an exciting and important time in your life. If your relationship with your partner is a HEALTHY one, you and your partner will feel good about yourselves and value each other. However, sometimes relationships can be HURTFUL and have a negative effect on your feelings of self worth and self-confidence. This can happen if your partner is abusive towards you. If this is the case, you are in an UNHEALTHY relationship. Remember, being on your own is also a healthy way to be. Having a partner is not a necessary part of life. Discovering life for yourself can be exciting and rewarding.

What is abuse?

Abuse is being hit, slapped or pushed around. It can also be invisible and leave no marks. Emotional and verbal abuse can be terrifying and equally dangerous.

Does your relationship include abuse?

You may feel that it's your fault if things aren't working out. Sometimes living with the abuse seems better than being alone. You may hope that your partner will change and the abuse will stop – chances are, things will get worse! This happens to many people – you are not alone and IT'S NOT YOUR FAULT! Remember, all forms of abuse are attempts to control. TAKE CONTROL OF YOUR LIFE, BE YOURSELF, TAKE CHARGE!

relationship QUIZ

In a relationship, have you ever experienced:

- physical violence? YES ☐ NO ☐
- threats that your partner will leave you if you don't do what he/she asks? YES ☐ NO ☐
- being kept away from family and friends? YES ☐ NO ☐
- not being allowed to look at or speak to other males/females? YES ☐ NO ☐
- having to justify your whereabouts? YES ☐ NO ☐
- your partner using guilt trips to get his/her own way? YES ☐ NO ☐
- not being able to go out without your partner? YES ☐ NO ☐
- any put-downs about your physical appearance? YES ☐ NO ☐
- your partner never being satisfied with you? YES ☐ NO ☐
- fear or intimidation by your partner? YES ☐ NO ☐
- being treated badly or humiliated in front of your friends or family? YES ☐ NO ☐

If you answered YES to one or more questions, you may be in an unhealthy relationship.

Tips for Safer Dating

- Tell someone where you're going and with whom.
- Meet in public places for the first few dates.
- Have transportation or money for the bus, taxi and phone.
- Be able to call a taxi: know the address of where you are.
- State your limits. Know how far you want to go.
- Have a safety plan.
- Avoid alcohol and never leave your drink unattended.
- Pay your own way: be independent.
- Get to know your date. Are your date's values similar to yours?
- In a long term dating situation, keep in touch with your family and friends.
- Trust your instincts.

Far From The Heart

Encourage Reflection

It's easy for students to repeat the 'right answers' without actually understanding them. We want them to fully understand the influences that encourage abuse, the impact that they have, and the importance of healthy relationships. This can be done individually or in groups.

Personal Reflection

- Draw-the-Line is a campaign working to engage Ontarians in conversations about sexual violence by asking what they would do in real life scenarios. You can find downloads of all Draw-the-Line materials at Draw-the-Line.ca as well as a user guide with additional ideas and suggestions.
<http://draw-the-line.ca/resources/index.html>

Media Critique

- Media images shape young people's perspectives. Critically examining media messages helps students to question projected values and increases their media literacy. You could analyze ads the students bring in or refer to the collection below.
 - The Critical Media Project collects examples of questionable narratives from advertisements and pop culture and examines a variety of issues including sexual power and gender. Guiding questions and a short critique accompany each example.
<http://criticalmediaproject.org/>
- Ask your students to use what they learned about relationship dynamics and rape myths to analyze a popular song.
What kind of relationships does the song describe? How does it portray romantic relationships? Where on the healthy relationship spectrum does it fall? Students could analyze any relationship song but some examples might include:
 - Summer Nights - Grease
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ODOj2jBUKW0>
 - What Kind of Love Is That – Donovan Woods
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bxI2p6wjO6A>
 - Love Yourself – Justin Bieber

Gender Swapping Language

- Simply swapping the genders within a story – fictional, journalistic, or otherwise – can expose the bias and double standards hiding in our language and culture. The plugin 'Jailbreak the Patriarchy' will automatically swap the genders of what you're reading. You can apply the same idea to fiction, journalism, and historical texts. See the next page for details.

Gender Swapping – “Jailbreak the Patriarchy”

Method: Whole Class

Purpose:

- Gender-based analysis of language and behavior through “gender swapping” language in an article

Learning Objectives:

- To change perspectives and understand how language frames gender

Source: Online “Jailbreak the Patriarchy” is an extension available for Google Chrome at <https://github.com/DanielleSucher/Jailbreak-the-Patriarchy>

This cool little tool “Gender swaps” language in an article on your computer. Developed by Danielle Sucher, it swaps English pronouns and gendered words like “mother” or “patriarchy” with their opposing counterpart. Other coders have created versions for Safari and Firefox. See: <http://www.daniellesucher.com/2011/11/jailbreak-the-patriarchy-my-first-chrome-extension/> You may not have access to this tool in the classroom, so here’s an alternative.

Instructions:

1. Select some good readers.
2. Model “gender-swapping”. Change: “He loved his mother” to “she loved her father.” Ask the class to change a couple of other sentences.
3. Distribute a copy of a news article or a passage from a book to everyone in the class. You could also show it on a screen. You could use any children’s story, film description, news story, etc.
3. Readers read it out loud to the class and swap all of the gendered pronouns and words while reading.
4. Talk about what you heard. Prompt questions could include:
 - What did you notice when the words were “gender-swapped”?
 - How do the story and the language make you feel?
 - What does this story tell you about the differences between men and women’s lives?
 - Do guys talk like that? Do girls? In what context?
 - Would girls / women really behave the way the characters did when the genders were swapped?
 - What does that suggest about women and men / boys and girls?
 - What does language show about gender roles / activities / needs / opportunities?
 - What does this exercise make you want to do?
 - What needs to change?
 - Can we change that?

Far From The Heart

Spread the Message

It's cliché to fight fire with fire so we need to provide a cool alternative if we want students to stop being burned by – and burning each other with – dating and sexual violence. It's time to disarm a culture of violent messages with non-violent and positive peer support.

After your students have learned more about consent, healthy relationships, and sexual assault they can create a positive message to share. This stage of activity will remind them that what they have to say is important, teach them that they have the power to create social change, and give them an opportunity to be creative and take ownership of the message.

You can incorporate these activities into visual or dramatic arts, creative writing, or leadership activities in a number of ways to fulfill curriculum requirements.

Step 1: Create the message

- Encourage students to focus on one message they'd like to send to their school and community. Help them refine it for clarity and impact, referencing other advertisements or PSAs for effect.

Step 2: Select a platform

- You may want all of your students to create the same type of project or for them to choose their own medium. In this case, their imagination is the limit. They could create a meme, poster, poem, song, 'zine, sculpture, painting, video or anything else.
- See the 'Public Service Announcements' activity on the next page for an example.
- Students can also directly reference Far From the Heart by filming their own intervention and sharing it with us on social media. See the 'Make Your Own Movie' activity below for instructions.

Step 3: Share the message

- Sharing their messages with the class, school, or wider community as they are comfortable will help to empower your students and reinforce their positive ideas. You may choose to decorate a bulletin board, hold an art show, organize an open mic, or include a piece in an assembly or the school newsletter.

Step 4: Repeat and Expand

- Some students will become passionate about these issues and want to continue this work. You can encourage them to volunteer with some of the organizations who provided community facilitators, to join school clubs working on these issues such as GSAs, or to create their own groups around specific issues like healthy relationships. You can also find links to youth empowerment tool kits and resources at www.farfromtheheart.com.

Far From The Heart

Use the Internet to create positive social messages.

Social Media Messaging

To join the Far From the Heart movement:

Write and film your PSA using the following format.

1. Intro: "This is coming to you from (location, country)."
2. "We're supporting the Far From the Heart campaign against teen dating violence and sexual assault."
3. Your PSA
4. Outro: "Help spread the message by sharing and liking this video. If you want to help stop the violence then participate in Far From the Heart and post your own message too. Go to www.farfromtheheart.com for details."
5. Post it online and tag Far From the Heart.
6. Send the link to sheatre@sheatre.com so we can link it to our website too.

Have fun!

Have Your Say: Public Service Announcements

Method: Individual and / or Small Group Exercise

Purpose:

- To get students actively engaged in an activity that continues the integration and use of the information presented in Far From the Heart.
- To reach youth who have not participated directly in Far From the Heart.

Benefit:

- Students create tools that get the message out to other youth about violence and sexual assault within relationships. They can use any social media platform.

Learning Objectives:

- Learning how to use language powerfully, purposefully and succinctly
- Learning how to identify a good PSA.

Instructions:

The internet can be a powerful tool for sending positive messages. Let's use it. A Public Service Announcement is a kind of advertisement used on radio, television, the internet and over school speaker systems. The short form is PSA. A Video PSA, of course, is one that's filmed.

Every PSA places a slogan in the context of a longer message. The slogan sums it all up, packs the punch, and sends the message home. Discuss and write the message you want to give. You can post your slogan with our Facebook page @Sheatre or on Instagram @sheatre.play.for.a.change and by tagging #farfromtheheart.

Now write the whole piece as though it's a radio or TV announcement, placing the slogan inside the PSA where it will really cap the message. Use any style you want. Be creative with it. The whole piece should be about 30 seconds long when read out loud. That's roughly 70 words long.

Once the students have written their PSA, have them share with the class. Ask the class to identify the ones that really deliver the message strongly. Why do they think so? What's so powerful about it?

Now put the PSA into action.

Practice reading the PSA out loud as though you are an announcer or performer.

What tone of voice and emotional quality delivers it the best?

If there were music, what kind of music, what mood of music, might there be?

Don't stop here! Have students read selected PSA's read on the intercom during the school announcements.

Now, select the most effective PSA, film it as though it's an advertisement, post it to YouTube or the social media platform of your choice and share it with Far From the Heart.

Far From The Heart

Make Your Own Far From the Heart Movie

Your class already watched the play. What else could be done to prevent harm coming to Felicity? What else can you do to make positive change in the world of the play?

You can create and post your own interventions online. Or you can do this activity for your own class's comprehension and analysis without filming or posting the results.

Method: Small Group or Whole Class Exercise

Purpose:

- To engage students in an activity that continues the integration and use of the knowledge arising from FFTH.

Instructions:

1. Recall the basic story. You can review the play online at www.farfromtheheart.com.
2. Brainstorm actions that would help prevent harm from coming to Felicity. Select three or four of the most resonant or impactful interventions.
3. Divide the class into three or four smaller groups, each dedicated to ONE of the actions. Each group will work on a distinct scene. No two groups will work on the same scene. In these small groups, have students create a short scene of about one or two minutes acting out their solution and showing how that would help things turn out for the better.
4. Rehearse and present the scene back to the class.
5. Ask the class what was effective and why? What changed? Was it realistic? What did you see / hear? How do the characters feel about it all now? What might happen next?
6. What is the most effective intervention? Film it so the actors can see how they did.
7. Submit your intervention at www.farfromtheheart.com or tag @sheatre on Facebook and @sheatre.play.for.a.change on IG, or use #farfromtheheart. For complete instructions on how to film and submit online go to http://www.farfromtheheart.com/index_en.php?page=interact

Far From The Heart

Peer support networks are especially important during the teen years and it's possible that students will turn to each other for support before coming to an authority figure. This resource will help teens develop the tools they need to support each other.

Resources to Share

How to Help a Friend

Teens are often more open to talking with each other than with counselors or parents.

If one of your students knows someone who's being abused, here's what they can do to help.

- Be there. Let them know you care and want to help. Let them decide what help they want from you. It's very important that they make their own decisions. You can listen and offer suggestions and encouragement but they must choose what will be best for them.
- Listen, believe and do not judge. It's not your job to prove how it happened. It's your job as a friend to listen and give comfort and support.
- Listen without giving advice, unless it is asked for.
- Let them know they're not to blame. You may need to do this over and over again. It's important that they know the offender is to blame, not them.
- Don't make victim-blaming statements like "You're stupid to stay with him/her" or "Why do you let her/him treat you like this?" This will NOT help your friend.
- Respect their right to privacy by letting them be in control of who they want to tell. You should not repeat their story unless they have specifically asked you to.
- Don't pressure your friend to break up with their partner, and don't put the partner down. This may drive your friend away from you when they need you most.
- Acknowledge your friend's confused feelings. Don't tell your friend how they should feel. Recognize that it is still possible to love someone who hurts you.
- Encourage your friend to get help. Offer to help them find a counselor they can trust, and offer to go with them to meet the counselor.
- Call a Crisis Line anonymously to find out what you can do to help your friend.
- Get written information on relationship abuse and share it with your friend.
- Don't ever place conditions on support. Let your friend know you will support them no matter what their decisions are.
- Allow your friend to make their own decisions, and respect those decisions even if you don't agree with them.
- Put aside your feelings and deal with them somewhere else. It's difficult to hear the hurt, anger, and pain of someone close to you without feeling that way too. It is important that you talk about these feelings with someone else, because it is difficult enough for them to deal with their own feelings without having to deal with yours as well.
- Call the police if you witness physical violence.

Far From The Heart

➤ Supportive things friends and parents can say:

- I care about you.
- You're not alone.
- I'm glad you told me.
- How can I/we help you feel safer?
- It's not your fault that this happened to you.

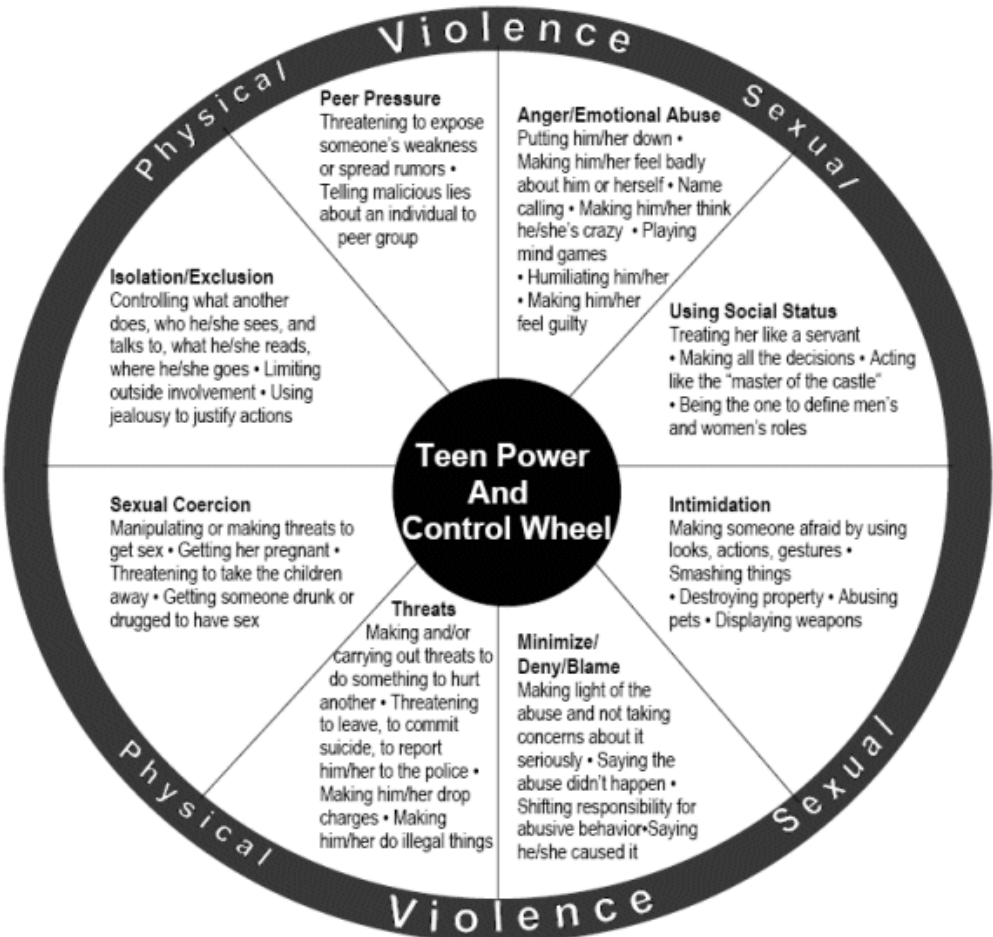

If you know someone who is abusing a girlfriend or boyfriend, here's what you can do to help.

- Tell your friend very clearly that his or her behavior isn't cool.
- Don't laugh at jokes or make light of talk about abusive behavior.
- Encourage your friend to get help. Offer to help them find a counselor they can trust, and offer to go with them to meet the counselor.
- Be supportive of your friend's partner. Let them know that they don't deserve to be abused.
- Call a Crisis Line anonymously to find out what you can do to help your friend stop the abusive behavior, and what you can do to help your friend's partner.
- Get written information on relationship abuse and share it with your friend and your friend's partner.
- Be a role model for healthy relationships by treating your partner and friends with respect.
- Speak up when peers make disrespectful remarks or sexist jokes.
- Call the police if you witness physical violence. In many cases, an abuser can be required to seek counseling.

The Power & Control, and Equality Wheels

These wheels were adapted from the Domestic Abuse Intervention in Duluth, Minnesota and provide a framework for healthy and unhealthy relationships.

The Power and Control Wheel describes many of the behaviours and tactics that abusive partners use. We include it here to help you better recognize and understand the experience of victims and survivors. It can be used to help people understand and speak about various types of violence and their impact.

Adapted from the Domestic Abuse Intervention in Duluth, Minnesota

The Equality Wheel describes aspects and characteristics of healthy teen relationships. You can use it to help teens identify the behaviours that contribute to the healthiest types of relationships and to juxtapose unhealthy or violent behaviours.

Frequently Asked Questions

How long will the teacher orientation take?

The training will take roughly one hour but can be shortened to fit time constraints. For schools that cannot arrange a live orientation, a short video orientation is available on the education page of www.farfromtheheart.com.

Why are we doing pre-show activities?

Far From the Heart discusses difficult issues. These activities help students prepare themselves. It's our responsibility as adults to prepare young people for this conversation and ensure that they can engage with the issues during the presentation.

How long will pre-show activities take?

Pre-show activities can be completed with a class in a single period (roughly 45 minutes).

How long is the show?

The whole show will take 125 minutes: 90 minutes for the show, 5 minute transition, 30 minute small group debrief.

Why do I need to stay with my class during the show?

It can be difficult for some students to engage with these issues. Your presence will help to set the tone, respond to inappropriate behaviour, and gauge if a student requires assistance from a counselor or from you.

Are there curriculum connections?

Far From the Heart supports multiple aspects of the Ontario Curriculum and the follow up activities can be used to fulfill requirements as well. See the Curriculum Links page for a selection of curriculum references or visit our website for a comprehensive list of curriculum connections.

How do you know this program works?

The past nine tours have shown us the impact first hand, participant feedback supports it, and in 2011 the University of Regina Community Research Unit quantified the impact with research that showed "Far From the Heart works to successfully increase students' knowledge and shift attitudes". Find the full report at FarFromtheHeart.com.

What if I don't have time for the follow up activities?

We hope you'll find a way to continue teaching and talking about these issues but we know that the demands on class time are intense. The follow up activities are flexibly designed to fit into a variety of course and class contexts.

What is a community facilitator and why are they coming to our school?

Community facilitators are individuals from your school and community who work in the violence prevention, public health, counseling, justice, or education fields. They join for the performance to make sure that we have trained professionals on hand in case a student is upset and needs additional support. They also lead the post-show debriefing discussion so that students can expand on these issues with a professional who works in a related field. Including community facilitators also introduces students – and teachers – to the supports available locally and humanizes the service providers.

Technical Requirements - Please Read Carefully

ARRIVAL AND SET UP

The company will arrive approximately 1 hour before the performance to set up. Please make sure that no other activities are scheduled in the space after the arrival and during the performance times.

A member of Sheatre's team will be in touch at least two days prior to confirm the company's arrival time.

Please arrange for the contact person or appropriate staff member to meet the company at the office, answer any questions they may have, escort them to the space, and inform them when the full audience is seated and the show may begin.

If possible, we request the assistance of 4 student leaders to help load in and out.

The company requires the following items for the performance:

- 2 regular folding tables
- 8 additional chairs in the audience for community facilitators
- Access to electrical plugs or an extension cord suitable to run power to the performance space.
- 1 dust/dry mop (if the space has not been recently cleaned)
- Easy stair access between the audience and stage.

FACILITIES

We are flexible and will work with your space as needed. In general, the performance space required is roughly 30' wide x 20' deep x 9' high. A stage, cafetorium, drama room, or gym will be suitable. The cast will ideally perform on a stage with easily accessible stairs for audience members to enter and leave by but we can comfortably perform on the floor as well. The Tour Coordinator will be in touch to discuss your performance space.

- Please clear the floor and area and make sure it is clean and dry for the set-up, performance time and for the take down time on the day of the performance.
- Please provide water or access to water. A nearby water fountain or a jug and glasses are preferable to water bottles
- Two change rooms with no public access are needed before and after the show with easy access to washrooms and performing areas.
- Please have bells, PA systems and air conditioning fans turned off in the playing space if possible during the performance.
- Please discourage staff and students from entering or leaving the venue during the show (with the exception of students who are triggered).
- Flash Photographs, audio or video recording is strictly prohibited unless permission is received in advance from the company.

SEATING

- If the performance is on the gym floor, the audience should be seated on the floor (ideally on mats or something comfortable).
- If the performance is on a stage, the audience should be seated in chairs or on benches. The chairs should be as close as possible to the stage while allowing a small aisle along the front.

- Please provide a centre aisle the width of two chairs.
- The audience seating should be no more than 6ft wider than the width of the stage area ie. The person sitting at the end of the front row needs to be able to see the whole stage
- Teachers are asked to sit with their classes for adequate supervision.

PERFORMANCE LENGTH

The performance is 125 minutes, including the 30 minute problem play, 60 minutes of guided student intervention, and finally 30 minute small group discussion. We schedule five minutes for classes to reach the locations of their discussions. Please ensure that students are in position to begin promptly. The audience should be seated at the scheduled start time.

Post-show Facilitated Discussion*: This is strictly for students who saw the play. The audience divides into small discussion groups of about 30 students each (or by class), in separate locations. Discussions will be led by community facilitators provided by Sheatre. If students are returning to classes with students who have not seen the production, a separate debriefing space should be found for the students who attended the show.

If possible, please refrain from scheduling a debriefing discussion in the performance space as it will prevent the cast from tearing down the set.

POST SHOW DISCUSSIONS

Post-show Facilitated Discussion: These are strictly for students who saw the play and allow audience members to begin to process their ideas and ask questions in a safe and informed setting. We will divide the audience into small discussion groups of about 30 students each (or by class) and they'll head to separate locations. The discussions will be led by qualified community facilitators organized by Sheatre.

If students are returning to classes where there are students who have not seen the production, a separate debriefing space should be found for the students who attended the show. The performance opens up what can otherwise be difficult conversation topics and the post-show discussions are most constructive and healthy when the entire group has the play for a reference point. If possible, please refrain from scheduling a debriefing discussion in the performance space as it will prevent the cast from tearing down the set.

AFTER THE SHOW

Please allow 30 minutes for the performers to strike the set.
We appreciate the assistance of 4 student leaders to help load out.

learning through theatre, music and photography
Grades 5 - 12

A play, photographic exhibition and workshops are at the heart of Be Our Ally.

Check it out: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VfppN3Et8VA>

The Play: The 75-minute interactive play explores the struggle of LGBTQ youth and the impact of bullying and homophobia.

The story: When Tommy asks Jake to the school dance, his sister turns on him, his friend betrays him, and he's beaten. Tommy wonders what its like to die. Who will help him? Will his friend? Will you? In this interactive drama, audience members help to confront his tormentors and change the situation for the better.

Fee: $800 for one show

Photographic Exhibition: The images are portraits of LGBTQ youth and their allies. The exhibition, supported with audio messages, sheds light on the strength, fragility and resiliency of youth, including youth of different sexual orientations, and their allies in our community.

Fee: $200 plus travel if required

Short Workshops are available with Sheatre's artists to intensify awareness and positive action. 75 minutes.

Fee: $200 plus travel if required

The project was made with youth in Grey-Bruce-Owen Sound, facilitated by Joan Chandler, David Sereda and Anna Gaby-Trotz.
